When White America Gets Pneumonia: COVID19 and Structural Racism

Do not miss our keynote lecture for Women's History Month, presented by Dr. Linda Rae Murray, MD, MPH, a national leader in community health and career activist for social justice in healthcare. Introduction and Remarks by Provost Peter Nwosu and Dean Elgloria Harrison of the School of Health Sciences, Human Services, and Nursing.

Dr. Murray's presentation will examine the historical experience of American medicine with the concept of race, demonstrating how structural racism has resulted in significant gaps in mortality based on race and ethnicity. She will further examine the role structural racism has played in the differential impact of Covid-19 on people of color. Dr. Murray will consider also to what extent responses to the pandemic have decreased the impact of racism.
